

Briefing Session on Graduate Study Opportunities at Washington University in St. Louis (WUSL)

Dear students and colleagues,

Prof. Nancy Morrow-Howell, Director of the Harvey A. Friedman Center for Aging at Washington University in St. Louis (WUSL) and Miss Melody Li, current PhD candidate in Comparative Literature at WUSL, would like to share the graduate study opportunities at WUSL.

The McDonnell International Scholars Academy offers opportunities for outstanding students to pursue postgraduate degrees at Washington University, one of America's most distinguished research institutions. The University of Hong Kong is one of a select group of universities whose graduates are eligible for McDonnell fellowships.

Recipients of McDonnell fellowships are awarded stipends that cover full tuition and fees, all housing expenses, annual travel, and a generous living allowance, and they participate in a range of cultural and other events. Competition is highly selective. Speakers will describe Washington University, the McDonnell program, and the application and selection process. All undergraduate/postgraduate students and staff interested in graduate studies in WUSL are welcome.
